

Nordensa:

Nordensa.com

<https://www.instagram.com/nordensafootball/>

Nexdoo:

<https://www.instagram.com/nexdooparties/>

Safe Travel:

<https://safetravel-two.vercel.app/index.html#>

Racefiets013:

<https://racefiets013.com/>

Love's Conception book:

<https://www.amazon.com.br/Loves-conception-Guilherme-Fernandes/dp/B0F255BJ2M>

My instagram/travel portfolio/vlogui:

<https://www.instagram.com/guilhermejsf>

Ha.bits:

<https://my-ha-bits.vercel.app/today>

Mumzers:

I was asked to do the following consultation:

If you were joining Mumzers and your goal was to significantly increase wholesale accounts, how would you design a system to scale our outreach while keeping it authentic and personalized (not feeling like spam)?

Specifically:

- How would you identify and organize target retailers?
- How would you structure outreach and follow-ups?
- What tools, automation, or processes would you use?
- How would you maintain quality given that we are positioned as a luxury product?

Case 2 — Increasing Consistency in Direct-to-Consumer Sales

We also sell directly through Shopify.

When customers do purchase, orders tend to be strong — often multiple items from first-time customers. However, the main challenge is that sales are inconsistent. Some days or weeks perform well, while others are quiet.

If you joined the company tomorrow and your goal was to make DTC sales more consistent, what would be the first steps you'd take?

Specifically:

- What would you analyze first to understand the problem?
- What strategies would you test to increase consistent traffic and sales?
- What systems or experiments would you implement in the first 30–60 days?

Again, the goal here isn't a perfect answer — I'm mainly interested in your thinking process and how you approach solving problems.